Key Program Strategies (Please provide a brief overview of program strategies including number of students served and program costs):

1. See below for a list of all services and goals.

Results Achieved (Bullets or Brief Description):

Additional Notes: The Princeton Review offers a comprehensive assortment of college readiness and planning services for students and their families. All of these services can be customized into a school-based program that will best fit the college planning and readiness goals for a specific school population.

- Laying the Foundation – Early Edge Courses. To address content specific goals associated with college readiness we offer our Early Edge courses for students in 6th to 12th grade. These courses focus on foundational skills in math and ELA, aligned to common core standards. Classes are designed to engage students in active learning and develop critical-thinking skills.
- Improving Academics – 24/7 Tutoring. Students can connect with our academic tutors in any K-12 subject at any time of day or night using our cutting-edge platform (formerly Tutor.com). Avail in bulk hours or per student license.
- Getting into College – PSAT, ACT and SAT Courses. Our organization is built on our success in standardized test preparation. We invest heavily into R&D and technology to ensure our students have the most updated information and tools. Our courses teach content and specific, proven strategies that only come from a deep knowledge of each test.
- Navigating Transition – Up Next Courses. In addition to academic and test preparation, we also need to address the psycho-social aspects of transitioning to high school and college including goal setting, time management, critical thinking, and motivation in an engaging and personalized format.
- Engaging the Family – College Planning Workshops. Students and their families can attend our Road Map to College workshops and start their specific personalized plan for college and/or career planning. Including: Financial Aid, Applying for Scholarships, Acing the College Essay, Getting Into College, and Finding Your Best Fit College.
- Professional Development Workshops. We provide professional development sessions for counselors, teachers, and administrators that engage and empower the learners to help drive a college-going culture and improve equity of access to information about postsecondary options for all students.
