Mountain Fest and 75th Anniversary Celebration

“CLIMBING TO NEW HEIGHTS”

I came to a place, toward evening,
Where a tree had chosen a view.
It offered a hand with my tent rope.
In the morning I bade it adieu.

Last campfires never die. And you and I
On separate ways to life's December,
Will always dream by this last fire
And have this mountain to remember.

Into the cloud - see far below
I, lonely, watched the red sun go.
Then, turning, miracle of glad surprise,
Enchanted, saw the full moon rise.

Poems by Clark Schurman, designer of the camp and climbing rock, mountaineer and scout leader
