Glenn Harris, Manager of the Seattle's Race and Social Justice Initiative, to become President of New York City's Center of Social Inclusion

After six years as the Manager of the City of Seattle's Race and Social Justice Initiative (RSJI) in the Seattle Office for Civil Rights, Glenn Harris has accepted a position as president of the Center for Social Inclusion (CSI) in New York City, NY. The Center for Social Inclusion is a national policy strategy organization that works to transform structural barriers to opportunity for communities of color, and ensure that everyone shares in the benefits of public policy. As president, Glenn will bring his policy, program development and fundraising expertise to help move a national agenda on race and equity.

To help ensure a successful transition, Glenn will continue working part-time with RSJI until the end of 2014. "I am deeply proud of the work of the Race and Social Justice Initiative and the employees of Seattle," said Glenn Harris. "Our work has been a national model for the role of government in addressing racial equity and I look forward to continuing that work with CSI."

The Seattle Office for Civil Rights will be conducting a national search later this year to find a new RSJI Manager. "The Center for Social Inclusion is fortunate to have Glenn's vision and leadership, and we are looking forward to seeing his work unfold on the national stage," said Patricia Lally, director of the Seattle Office for Civil Rights. "Glenn and I also are excited to add new leadership to RSJI's talented team."

The City of Seattle's Race and Social Justice Initiative works within City government and with community leaders to get to the root cause of racial inequity: institutional racism. RSJI is led by the Seattle Office of Civil Rights.
