RE: Support for Plant Amnesty's application to Washington State's Department of Ecology Public Participation Grant for Contaminated Site Cleanups

Dear Jorge:

Plant Amnesty, a local non-profit organization specializing in the environmental and economic value of trees and vegetation, is applying to the Washington State Department of Ecology Public Participation Grant for Contaminated Site Cleanups.

The grant's intent is to develop protocols for voluntary cleanup actions which incorporate a public participation process based on EPA guidelines. Plant Amnesty is proposing to use one of Seattle City Light's contaminated properties, including surplus properties, as a test case to determine those protocols.

The actions taken under Plant Amnesty's proposal would help to establish protocols to foster better communication throughout the disposition process and educate stakeholders to arrive at a shared understanding regarding remediation options. The stakeholders invited would be Seattle City Light representatives, property neighbors, City Light's environmental consultant, community groups, and Department of Ecology representatives.

The Commission wholeheartedly supports Plant Amnesty's application to the Public Participation Grant for Contaminated Site Cleanups and encourages Seattle City Light to support this application as well.

Sincerely,
