Monthly Topics:

1. Lower Taylor Creek Restoration Project: Public Access Options Analysis, Julie Crittenden

- The Public Access Options Analysis and staff-level recommendation was presented to CDWAC after a tour of the site
- Overall, the group was very supportive of the project
- The group did not identify one favored option, but preferred options that had less chance of impacting habitat and use by fish and wildlife (e.g., Viewpoint and or Scheduled Access)
- Concerns and things to think about:
 - how open public access could impact the immediate neighbors
 - pedestrian safety due to the traffic and parking issues
 - how the different public access options could affect salmon habitat and use of the area by other wildlife
- Members also provided some suggestions for protecting habitat if public access of some sort was provided to the project site:
 - use fencing around the stream (e.g., Piper's Creek)
 - close the park during certain times (e.g., 4th of July, spawning season)
 - examine other small street end parks in Seattle for design and implementation lessons
 - monitor the site if public access is allowed
 - make adjustments as needed to protect the restored habitat
