

Join Seattle City Councilmember Sally J. Clark for a special Committee on the Built Environment meeting on:

Rowhouses, Apartments & Townhomes - New Rules for the Road

How can we create neighborhood-friendly multifamily housing?

Seattle City Council Committee Meeting

Saturday, March 20

10 a.m. - noon

Taproot Theatre in Greenwood (204 N 85th St)

It's time to change the way we design and shape new lowrise buildings in Seattle. City Council will change the code to make quality, sustainable, well-designed multifamily housing that synchs with the neighborhoods where they are built – and we need your help!

This is a prime opportunity for Councilmembers to hear your feedback

How can we encourage more quality projects like Denny Rowhouses, pictured above (David Foster Architects) or Urban Canyon, pictured below (b9 architects)?

(William Wright Photography)

Meeting Format:

- Council Staff will highlight some of the hot-button issues.
- Councilmembers will then work through some of the topics
- Substantial time will be dedicated to hearing from you, the attendees
- Coffee and doughnuts will fuel the creativity

Highlighted topics will include parking requirements, building heights, density limits, code simplification, and design review requirements.

Parking is available in the lot behind the theatre. You can plan your bus trip here. Translation services available upon advance request. Meeting space generously donated by Taproot Theatre.

Lean more about the Multifamily Code Update at Councilmember Sally J. Clark's website, here.
Questions about the event? Contact her office at (206) 684-8802 or sally.clark@seattle.gov