

Seattle Permits

— part of a multi-departmental City of Seattle series on getting a permit

Sources for Property Information

November 2, 2005

Basic information about a piece of property may be needed before the property owner can apply for use or building permits. Information about the legal description, zoning, property lines, legally established use, recorded easements and code violations is available from various city, county, and state agencies.

This publication lists sources of information which can assist property owners in conducting research. Many of these resources also can be obtained through DPD's website at www.seattle.gov/dpd/research.
