1	If the rules for pedestrian zones be amended to encourage and promote single-family residences, parks, gardens, natural areas and large old trees, then yes to question 14, otherwise no.	4/2/2014 4:12 AM
2	Regarding side walk width. I do not think that extra wide side walk is as important as well landscaped setback from the sidewalk. Regarding minimum size requirements--since I have no idea of the minimum size requirement, I cannot comment. I will say, however, that while I encourage density in urban areas, I do not want to see so much density as to make the city one of sky scrapers with narrow canyons between that block out the sun, act as heat sinks and wind tunnels. We need open spaces, adequate set backs, green buildings attractive and enlightened architecture and ecologically sound landscaping. I do not want to see size minimums which are arbitrary and only serve to maximize the profits of the developers.	4/1/2014 4:18 PM
