

From "003 Redux," Queen Anne News, December 31, 2003
By Russ Zabel

BRIDGEWORK

Plans for replacing the Magnolia Bridge caused a furor among many neighborhood residents early last year when it was revealed that one of the alternatives would have traveled along the waterfront on the southern edge of Magnolia.

The proposal, which was later dropped, would have wiped out several pricey waterfront residences, and just the threat of development lowered property values by 20 percent, one homeowner complained. Interbay P-Patchers were also peeved because one alternative for the bridge replacement would wipe out part of the community garden and parking lot.