

Seattle Pedestrian Master Plan Advisory Group (PMPAG)
 Summary of Issue Updates and Potential Starting Points for Research

Ranking	Issue Update Topics (Number of votes)	Starting Points for Research
High	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The Washington D.C. Great Streets Initiative (4) • Examples of the best and the worst areas (3) • Funding superstars (3) 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Website: Great Streets Initiative • Field trip with group • Denver, CO; St. Louis, MO; Washington, D.C.
Medium	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Businesses and Walking (2) • Shared Space (2) • Making Great Places (2) • The Pedestrian Master Plan Interagency Team* (2) • Driver Awareness (2) 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • TBD
Moderate	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Community Based Street Design (1) • Open Space 2100 (1) • Freight Community (1) • Driver Training and Re-certifications (1) • My top and only issue update right now is to plan this planning process (1) • Pedestrian Safety Statistics (1) • Traffic Signals and Pedestrian Crossing Times(1) • Developers' Perspectives on Walkable Neighborhoods (1) • Best pedestrian practices and policies, and their applicability to Seattle (1) • Design Standards for Bikes and Pedestrians: Similarities and Differences (1) • Safe Routes to School (1) • Private property owners adjacent to ROW (1) • Policy Superstars (1) • Accessibility Training (1) • GIS/Data possibilities (1) • Making the city a safer place to walk (1) 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • TBD

Input provided by: Brian Dougherty, Brian Johnston, Charles (Chas) Redmond, Fiona McCargo, James Bush, Kate Martin, Kirste Johnson, Michael McGinn, Paul Niebanck, Paulo Nunes-Ueno, Rebecca Deehr, Richard Staudt and Suzanne Anderson