Dear Editor,

We are very interested in your readers learning of an opportunity to apply to be included in a City of Seattle Transportation Study. We have written a short community notice that we would like you to consider publishing in your next issue, or if you prefer, there is a longer article attached which features previous study participants from West Seattle which you could run as an article or Letter to the Editor. If you would like to speak with Cathy and John, I would be glad to arrange that.

Also attached is the press release which you should have received in early July.

Please let me know how I may be of further assistance, or provide more information.

Sincerely,

Randy Wiger

Can your household get by with "one-less-car"?

Find out by participating in the City of Seattle's Way to Go, Seattle "One-Less-Car" Demonstration Study. Seattle families can discover if they can live with "one-less-car" and still get to where they need to go while saving an average of $85 per week. Households that participate in the "One-Less-Car" Demonstration Study will live with the real life conditions and financial benefits of eliminating the use of one car for a period of nine weeks this fall. In exchange for keeping detailed daily records of the trips they make, participating households will receive a financial stipend during the study period comparable to savings they would have if they actually owned "one-less-car."

To apply or find out more, contact the Way to Go, Seattle program at (206) 615-1550, or visit our website application form at ww.cityofseattle.net/waytogo/.
