Meeting Summary: On the evening of Friday, August 16th, Seattle Parks and Recreation staff along with design consultant Buffalo Design, held an Open House for the Magnuson Community Center Improvement Project. This was the second meeting held for this project, to present the preferred design to the community and collect input on some of the finishing options. Throughout the 2-hour event over 30 people stopped by to view the design, ask questions, and provide input. Attendees expressed excitement for the design of community center and the additional programming that it would bring. The most popular features were the large adjoining multi-purpose rooms, the kitchen, and the orange option for the front desk display. Members of the Magnuson Community Center Advisory Council were also present and helped introduce the design for attendees.
