Proposed Seattle Police Officers’ Guild Contract discussion with the Mayor’s Office

Guests from the Mayor’s Office came to discuss the SPOG Contract with the CPC. The discussion included that all parties have a desire to ensure that there is a consensus about how to conduct these conversations regarding the issues which have been raised, to include how all parties can identify possible areas of compromise and impasse, in an effort to move forward in a way that ensures that the community has what it needs to understand the impact of the tentative collective bargaining agreement. In addition, the CPC noted that it wished that there had more involvement in the contract negotiations. There was discussion regarding framing of the issues brought up, as well as, recognize healthy disagreements and a desire to correct confusion created by documents that both offices have put out or chosen not to put out. The Accountability Ordinance was discussed at length, and options on how to move forward included that follow up meetings will be scheduled with relevant parties.
