APPENDIX 4 to ASA MERCER MIDDLE SCHOOL LANDMARK NOMINATION

SUPPLEMENTAL INFORMATION: SEATTLE SCHOOL DISTRICT SCHOOLS BUILT BETWEEN 1945 AND 1965

JANUARY 15, 2021

At the July 18, 2012, public hearing of the City of Seattle Landmarks and Preservation Board (Board), for the matter of the Cedar Park School, the Board requested additional information on other schools built by Seattle Public Schools between 1945 and 1965. This supplement was originally developed to provide additional information on these schools for this specific request, but has been useful for all mid-century schools considered by the Board since that time.

This information in the supplemental report has been updated when specific schools have been landmarked or demolished. Please note that schools built during this period but gained by annexation after construction have been excluded. (These schools include Pinehurst Elementary, Jane Addams Junior High, and Woodrow Wilson Junior High.)

Larry E. Johnson, AIA, visited and photographed all schools identified below between August 14 and August 16, 2012. Other photographs may have been taken by The Johnson Partnership, or its successor firm, Studio TJP, since that time.

The supplement is organized thus: elementary schools, followed by junior high and middle schools, followed by high schools. All categories are arranged by date of construction. For each school, a summary of pertinent information is provided, as well as photos and additional information on each school building. A table of the schools and their locations and status is included in this document. These tables can also be found in Appendix 3 to this report, the history of the Seattle Public School District.

With permission from the authors and the publisher, Seattle School District No. 1, we have included corresponding school entries from Building For Learning, Seattle Public School Histories, 1862-2000, by Nile Thompson and Carolyn Marr, for additional reference.
