4	Please consider a mixture of your format ideas so that the static presentation parts are separate from the live online discussion. I think that could be a better use of everyone's time as well as more effective for identifying the most common questions. For example, create an online presentation that people can view at any time with a way for people to post questions they still have (not comments which often are polarizing, but questions about process, design, timing, impacts, etc...). Send multiple notices to people about this online presentation encouraging them to view it and submit questions. After that, schedule a live online session that does a very brief recap of the online presentation but spends the majority of the session addressing the most commonly asked questions and invite further Q&A and discussion.	5/25/2020 10:34 AM
