Appendix C: Community Based Organization Partners

Community Based Organization (CBO) Partner	CBO Background, Outreach & Policy Report Link
Asian Pacific American Labor Alliance (APALA)	APALA is an organization of Asian American and Pacific Islander workers and allies focused on worker, immigrant, and civil rights. APALA organizes and works in BIPOC communities across the Greater Seattle area. This CBO designed and carried out a tailored surveying process, deployed at union meetings, large public gatherings, and through 1:1 interviews, to learn more about the needs and priorities of the communities it serves. APALA Policy Report
Duwamish Valley Sustainability Association (DVSA)	The Duwamish Valley Sustainability Association (DVSA) engages South Park and Georgetown communities on issues related to quality of life, social justice, health, and education. The goal of their youth-led South Park Youth Vision Project was to understand the South Park community's needs and challenges, and to create policy strategies for local change. In partnership with Gehl Architects, this group piloted the use of a smartphone app (Eye Level City) to gather and visualize community-generated engagement data that formed the basis of its recommendations for the Plan. Cap Hill EcoDistrict Policy Report
Estelita's Library	Based in Seattle's Central District, Estelita's Library is a social justice library that supplies its community with a space to explore books, literature and conversations focused on social justice, ethnic studies, and liberation movements. The library hosted groups such as Seattle Urban League, North Star Cycling, and Smash the Box to discuss topics of displacement, cultural gathering spaces, and health to provide policy recommendations to inform the Plan. Estelita's Library Policy Report

Khmer Community of Seattle/King County + Noio Pathways + KIMYUNITY	The Khmer Community of Seattle/King County is a community organization that provides direct services to the local Khmer community of Seattle and South King County. The Khmer Community of Seattle/King County (KCSKC) teamed up with Noio Pathways and KIMYUNITY to create a year-long, immersive civic engagement project to obtain inputs used to inform its policy recommendations for the Plan. This CBO team led groups of Khmer youth and elders on field trips and site visits across Seattle to spark conversations identifying the main issues and engagement themes it put forth in its policy recommendations for the Plan. KCSKC's Policy Report
Capitol Hill EcoDistrict	Capitol Hill EcoDistrict works to create a more resilient, equitable, and vibrant community in the most densely populated urban village in Seattle, Capitol Hill. To inform its recommendations for the Plan, this group used surveys, pop-ups, and community space activations that facilitated engagement with a range of community stakeholders, including residents, small businesses, community organizations, City agencies, and major institutions. Cap Hill EcoDistrict Policy Report
Wa Na Wari/CACE 21	Wa Na Wari seeks to reignite Black cultural life and social connections in Seattle's Central District, creating space for Black ownership, possibility, and belonging through art, historic preservation, and connection. Its CACE 21 program is a community organizing initiative that seeks to build community power and capacity amongst Black Central District homeowners and Black cultural workers to advocate for land use policies that lower the barriers to creating more cultural spaces based on the Wa Na Wari model. Conversations and interviews with CACE 21 participants informed its recommendations for the Plan. Wa Na Wari's Policy Report
sləp̩l̩əb̩əx^w (Rising Tides) Indigenous Planning Group	Rising Tides is made up of leaders from Indigenous communities in the Coast Salish area and represents cultural knowledge keepers, Tribal nations, community leaders, and

	Native professionals engaged in city and regional planning efforts. This group seeks to cultivate a city that is culturally, socially, and economically inclusive of Tribal and urban Native people. sləp'iləbəx^w's conversations and interviews with these communities informed its recommendations for the Plan, which seek to increase awareness and understanding of Indigenous cultures and histories of settler colonization as a means to promote Indigenous approaches to planning, community, and cultural placekeeping.
