2. Allow for mid-6-year cycle corrections that would allow increases to the spending plan if needed.

Superintendent's Report– with Christopher Williams, Seattle Park and Recreation Deputy Superintendent

Glyphosate Executive Order. A Glyphosate restriction on City owned land will be announced tomorrow.

Big Day of Play. We had a very successful event on Saturday to celebrate our city's diversity and bring together neighbors, communities and families to have fun, build relationships and be active together. The free event featured active recreation booths and activities, including basketball, wheelchair rugby, goal ball, adaptive play equipment, rainbow bingo, sailing, rowing, and much more. Community members also enjoyed cultural music and dance presentations throughout the day. Thanks to those of you that were able to help at BDP, we really appreciated it.

Seattle Sounders FC and RAVE Foundation Event. Yesterday, the Seattle Sounders and RAVE Foundation hosted a Yesler community event to celebrate the new Sounders FC ownership partners. This event included over 100 youth participating in our programs at Yesler Community Center, and provided the kids with games, arts activities, photo booth, Sounders swag, soccer skills training and challenges. They also had an opportunity to see, listen to and meet Seattle celebrity athletes and pop music stars. It was an exciting day of fun for the Yesler community.

Reimagining Civic Commons. Tomorrow, SPR leadership will host a delegation of parks and recreation leaders from around the country who are part of a national organization called Reimagining the Civic Commons, which advocates for investments in civic assets in the urban cores of large cities. They will hear a presentation and panel discussion on the Seattle Park District and take a walking tour of our downtown parks. Let me know if you would like to participate in the tour.

Teen Summer Musical. A reminder that the Teen Summer Musical is at Benaroya Hall until August 25th. This is a wonderful culmination of a 9-week summer program that showcases the talent of dozens of teens of color, providing them an introduction to the world of theater. There is still time to get tickets on the Seattle Symphony (Benaroya Hall) website.

Parks RX

Community Center Hours Reduction. For the last few years through our partnership of ARC, Seattle Parks and Recreation was able to offer additional operational hours at Ballard, Magnolia, Queen Anne, and Loyal Heights. This funding supported building monitors and allowed for free drop-in programming, or other programmed classes. These funds were no longer available to SPR. These centers will return to regular hours in Fall 2019. SPR recognizes that communities would love more hours from their community centers and pools, and we are currently working on re-tooling our model to more strategically provide hours and programs. For some background, in 2014 community centers were open a weekly combined total of 1,194, this year we operated centers at a combined weekly total of 1361.

SPR Reorganization

Planning and Development Division. Michael Shiosaki has decided to take on a new role at another agency in the City of Seattle family. I'd like to thank Michael for his 19-year contribution to the department in the Planning and Development Division. During his tenure, he and the rest of the impressive Planning and Development team have added acres of new park land to our portfolio, developed dozens of new parks, renovated so many others, and completed some impressive projects including Rainier Beach Community Center, the Arboretum Loop Trail, Hing Hay Park, Yesler Terrace Park, and so many more. Please join me in thanking Michael for his significant contributions to Seattle Parks and Recreation. Michael's last day with the department was on August 16.

As Michael departs, I am appointing Andy Sheffer to fill the role of Planning and Development Division Director. I have asked Kim Baldwin to step into a new role as deputy director of the Planning and Development Division. We will be keenly focused on filling all the current vacancies in the division and will leverage additional resources to better ensure the success of this Division. Andy will transition to his new role this week. With Andy's move from the Facilities Division, I have asked Pamela Asplaugh to serve in an interim capacity as the director of the Facilities Division. Pam will start as the interim director on Monday, August 19.

To better position the Planning and Development Division to focus on the on-time, on-budget, delivery of capital projects, and on project and agency planning efforts, we are making two additional changes:

Seattle Conservation Corps. The Conservation Corps, managed by Ruth Blaw, will join the EPIC Division. In line with the desire to better focus the Planning and Development Division, this move will also provide additional support to the Corps given its proximity to EPIC Division leadership at Magnuson Park.

Property Management. This unit, led by Max Jacobs, will be reassigned to the Policy Unit in the Superintendent's Office and will report to Michele Finnegan, Policy Division Director. Again, this move allows the Planning and Development Division to focus singularly on project delivery and moving this unit directly under my office will support our work in bringing consistency and efficiency in our property management initiatives across the agency.

Human Resources. As many you know, we are in the process of hiring a new HR Director who will be joining my executive team.

Environmental Education Programming. Environmental Education Programs led by Chukundi Salisbury will move to the Recreation Division where the core mission is to provide programs for people. This realignment follows industry best practices in parks and recreation.

Outdoor Parks Programming. Outdoor Parks Programming implemented by Randy Wiger will be reassigned under Victoria Schoenberg in the Downtown Parks Unit which focuses on programming outdoor spaces through partnerships.

Specialty Gardens. This work (under Belinda Gigliotti) will be moved to the EPIC Division to better support their work and focus on partnership development.

The changes I've described are designed to help drive transformation through organizational alignment in order to help us better serve every resident. They will allow us to innovate with greater speed, efficiency and ultimately provide the capability to better serve a growing and dense community amid myriad challenges.

Q1: How big is your major maintenance backlog?

A1: We have not done a comprehensive major maintenance study recently, but we did one at the beginning of the current levy and it was very large. We intentionally wanted to put more funding towards things like ballfields, back country trails, sports courts, Marymoor and Dockton Parks.

Q2: What are the cycles for the equity and grant?

A2: We have not identified grant cycles yet. We have general guidelines that we developed for the purpose of the levy. We are required end of January to develop a more specific set of criteria We have to get approval from the county council on the specific criteria before publishing. But we do have general guidelines for each of the programs.

Q3: What portion of the revenue will come from City of Seattle taxpayers?

A3: Approximately 35% of the revenue will be generated by City of Seattle taxpayers.

Q4: Who is eligible for the grant programs?

A4: Eligible entities include

- County towns and cities,
- Tribes and tribal organizations,
- Nonprofit organizations, smaller emerging community organizations without 501(c)(3) status, through a partnership with fiscal agent.

Recreation Briefing: Community Learning Center (CLC)– with Out of School Time Manager and CLC Team

Summary: Justin Cutler, Recreation Division Director, provided an overview of the Community Learning Center (CLC) program. Justin shared that CLC programs are Out-of-School Time (OST) programs coordinated by Seattle Parks and Recreation staff professionals, based out of Seattle Public School sites and offered during afterschool, lunchtime, school breaks (winter, spring) and summer. These CLC's are currently active in five middle schools, one elementary school, and one K-8, collectively serving approximately 2300 students each year. At each site, has one CLC Coordinator who works closely with school administration and staff to ensure that OST programs incorporate both effective academic instructional models and youth development best practices.

The presentation focused on four aspects of the CLC program:

1. CLC Partnerships
2. The CLC mentoring program
3. The CLC College and Career Exploration Summer Pilot
4. CLC Student Stories

CLC team (Lori Chisholm, William King, Damien Hicks, Won Choi, Kirsten Bystrom, and Rebecca Brito) shared participant impact stories and photos that illustrate the methods and results of the CLC program. The CLC program is one of the units within the recreation division that really emphasizes outcomes, emphasizes data driven decision making into their program design and delivery. Justin closed by stating that the CLC program is a best practice and it exemplifies the direction of future recreation services offered by Seattle Parks and Recreation.

Selected Q&A, Comments- Recreation Briefing: Community Learning Center (CLC)

Q1: Is this the group from Aki Kurose that came to cook with the Park Board of Commissioners last year? We now make pupusas in my house because of that experience.

A1: Yes.

C2: You should make a book highlighting your success stories.

C3: Former DEEL Employee- Denny Aki Kurose and Mercer middle school have had notable, statewide turnarounds in schools that partnered with Seattle Parks and Recreation CLCs with support from the Families and Education Levy. Schools that had been failing schools until this program came in. That was not true of every intervention funded by the Families and Education Levy. The CLC program has won awards, they've been recognized, and I wanted to say it was not just incidents of great work, it was a complete school turnaround.

Q4: It was a fabulous presentation. Thank you.

Selected Q&A, Comments- Strategic Plan Update: Community Outreach and Engagement

Q1: Did you see there was a high level of engagement from non-English speakers? Can we quantify this?

A1: Not as high as we anticipated. We think there are some issues with the data collection process that impact the results. We need to dig in a little more with our Community Engagement Ambassadors.

Q2: Have you seen any trends of community interest in increased access to pools and public pools as a climate resiliency tool?

A2: Yes. There seems to be a community divide regarding whether public beaches or pools are the best solution.

Q3: How do we increase awareness of who to contact with strategic plan feedback? How does the strategic plan effort support continued relationship building with community?

A3: We are building strategies which will support a sustained connection with community. We are trying to diversify and give folks multiple opportunities to participate.

Q4: Did the feedback you received during the in-person engagement activities align with the feedback received on the survey?

A4: Yes. The survey is almost identical.

Q5: Did you hear any really brilliant ideas about the homelessness issues?

A5: We heard a desire to co-locate social services with community centers. People are there already. So, we should be doing things where people are.

C: I think this was a total homerun for PR for Parks and Recreation this year. I was at the Green Lake event. I tried to get people to say something negative and nothing. It was amazing the goodwill for what the department does.
